AMUSEMENTS.

—The following attractions are to appear at the Paris Grand:
"Holy City," matinee and night,
December 24.
Edwin Hoyt in "Hamlet," Dec. 30.
"James Boys In Missouri," Jan. 3.
"King Dodo," Jan. 5.
"Happy Hooligan," Jan. 7, matinee
and night.

—The announcement of the performance of "The Holy City," is received with great satisfaction. No play presented this season has made
the impression credited to this great Biblical drama produced by Gordon & Bennett in even more sumptuous manner than their other conspicuously successful productions. The coterie of players, trained chorus and monster
scenic equipment of this grand dramatic spectacle is everywhere praised
for superior combination and in arranging for its appearance here,
Manager Wiggins has given his patrons a theatrical feast that will be long remembered.

This grand production will be at the Paris Grand for matinee an evening of Saturday, Dec. 24.

What MITCHELL Says

I have the finest Candy ever
brought to Paris for any Christmas. Not a piece but is good and tastes like more. Candy at any price and all fresh.

It would do your eyes good to look at my show cases. Never was such a display in this town
before.

I want every person in the county to come and have a look.
I know you will buy.

Fame in Punch.

"It's funny how quickly fame comes to the professional pugilist. Just one punch and—"

"Yes, he's a mere nobody, but some morning he wakes up and finds himself famous."

"Oh, no. He doesn't become famous by waking up, but by putting some one else to sleep."—Chicago Journal.

Finally.

As you walk the way along,
Weave the sunlight in the song;
Even let the darkest night
Have one star that dreams of light!
—Atlanta Constitution.

ANOTHER GUESS COMING.

She—Is my hat on straight, Cholly?
He—No; it tilts to the right.
She—That is just what it should do,
you simpleton.—St. Louis Republic.

They Merely Tote 'Em.

"Now, how do you move your poles about?"
We queried. "Do you float 'em?"
The chief replied with cheerful shout:
"Oh, no! We merely tote 'em."
—Chicago Journal.

Sympathy.

"You look awfully tired, young man," said the benevolent-looking woman to the young man with the books under his arm.

"Yes, ma'am," replied the student. "I'm studying for a doctor."
"It's a shame! Why don't you let the doctor study for himself?"—Yonkers Statesman.

Disconcerts the Pastor.

A prominent English clergyman once congratulated an old lady on her bravery in fighting her way to church against a terrible tempest, but received the disconcerting reply: "My husband gets so cross-grained after meals that I have to get out of his way, so I might as well go to church."—Chicago Journal.

Glory.

"I understand that her mother is one of the Daughters of the American Revolution."
"Yes, but the thing that interests me is that the girl herself is the daughter of a millionaire."—N. Y. Herald.

Seasonable.

And now the restaurant garbage can
The season's story tells;
Where once we saw only melon rinds
We now see oyster shells.
—Chicago News.

THE MAIN POINT.

"How can you want to marry my daughter if you have never met her and know nothing about her?"
"But I know all about you, sir."—Chicago Chronicle.

Yette.

A man who loved his cigarette
Would buy one from each man he met,
He died one day
And people say
They think that he is smoking yette.
—Chicago Chronicle.

What He Thought.

Hixon—When I began chewing tobacco I thought it would make a man of me.
Dixon—You did, eh?
Hixon—Yes, but shortly after I took my first chew I thought it was going to make an angel of me.—Chicago News.

How He Does It.

"There goes a fellow who takes life easy."
"Somebody leave him a fortune?"
"No. He's an appendicitis specialist."—Chicago Record Herald.

Desperate.

"Do you realize how serious a thing marriage is?" her father, who was the president of the company, asked after the young man had laid the case before him.

"Yes, sir. I've thought it all over. I'm fully aware that it will be mighty serious, but it'll be worse if I don't get her. The general manager's taken a dislike to me, and if I'm to keep my job here there's got to be something doing right away."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Automobiles and Women.

Mr. Crimmonbeak—Automobiles are a good deal like women.

Mrs. Crimmonbeak—Because they are expensive, I suppose?

"Not exactly. Because they are hard to control, and when they get cranky you don't know what's the matter with them."—Yonkers Statesman.

Acheless Teeth.

"What shall I get for your birthday?" asked a father of his five-year-old daughter, who was suffering from toothache.

"I'd like some teeth like mamma's, so I can take 'em out when they ache," replied the observing miss.—Chicago News.

Insinuating.

"The world is a stage," she said dramatically, "and we women are really the star performers. Men are mere clowns."

"Perhaps," he retorted, glancing at her cheeks, "but it keeps the star performers busy making up."—Chicago News.

What He Would Do.

"What would you do if you were a king?" asked the man of vaulting ambition.

"I don't know," answered the matter-of-fact person; "I suppose I'd follow the fashion and wear a look of worry and a bullet-proof shirt."—Washington Star.

The Winner.

Some girls run madly after men,
And tangle them in talk;
Demureness tries a slower gait,
And wins out in a walk.
—Cincinnati Commercial-Tribune.

WOMEN—EVER UNREASONABLE.

"Hands up, or I fire!"—Punch.

A Scarcity.

The poets surely would have writ
More pieces on November,
If anything would rhyme with it Except the word "remember."
—Washington Star.

Precise.

"Who is the villain in your production?" asked the hotel clerk.
"Well," answered Mr. Stormington Barnes, "the man who plays the villain is named Smith; but the real villain is the manager who got us out here."—Washington Star.

Thoughts.

"A penny for your thoughts, dear," said the young girl who had just said "Yes."
"I'd give four dollars to know you father's without speaking to him," said the young man, with feeling.—Yonkers Statesman.

He Got the Job.

Boss—Well, what kind of a salary would you start in on?
Izzy—Ten thousand a year.
Boss—What?
Izzy—Yep; but you kin beat me down to two dollars and fifty cents a week.—Judge.

Liked Tips

"Do you like your tip before or after the meal, my man?" asked the rich-looking diner.
"Both, sir," was the waiter's prompt reply.—Yonkers Statesman.

Ingratitude.

"He is a monster of ingratitude."
"Yes. His wife was a nurse in a hospital. After she had got him through a serious illness he married her."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Specially Honored.

"Do you mean to tell me that when Muntoburn's daughter started away on her wedding tour they threw lumps of coal at the carriage?"
"Yes; everybody said rice was too cheap and common."—Chicago Tribune.

Why He Interrupted Ma.

Mother—Charlie, you must not interrupt me when I am talking to ladies. You must wait until we stop, and then you can talk.
Charlie—But, mother, you never stop.—Chicago Journal.

"FRENZIED FINANCE."

Application For An Indictment Against Thomas W. Lawson.

New York, Dec. 17.—An application for an indictment of Thomas W. Lawson and for the showing of the books of the Amalgamated Copper Co. was made at the district attorney's office Friday by Henry Wellington Wack, who lives most of the time in London. Mr. Wack is a member of the National Bar association of this country and of the Royal Geographical Society of London.

Accompanied by his lawyer, Charles M. Beattie, Mr. Wack called at the office of District Attorney Jerome and left there his formal application that Mr. Lawson be indicted.

Mr. Wack says that he owns outright 1,000 shares of Amalgamated, and that it was worth when he came here a few weeks ago $81,780.

As a result of Mr. Lawson's acts, Mr. Wack asserted, his stocks fell to 59 and he suffered a loss of approximately $21,000. Mr. Wack asks that a demand be made on the Amalgamated Co. for its books, to ascertain just what its stock is worth, and if Lawson's declaration proves false, he wants him indicted under chapter 435 of the code, third sub-division, which provides that any person who knowingly circulates a false rumor, statement or intelligence against a stock is punishable by a fine of not more than $5,000 or by imprisonment for not more than three years, or both.

PAUL KRUGER'S FUNERAL.

Fully 1,200 Persons Followed the Remains to the Last Resting Place.

Pretoria, Dec. 17.—The remains of the late President Paul Kruger were interred in the cemetery here Friday. Church services were held in a hall.

At the hall speeches of eulogy were delivered by Gens. Louis Botha, Schalkburger and Christian Dewet. Gen. Botha read a letter from Mr. Kruger exhorting them to preserve the Boer national spirit. The reading of this letter created a profound impression.

The procession to the cemetery was composed of fully 1,200 persons, while the route through which it passed was thronged with people. Flags were half masted, bells were tolled and under government orders minute guns were fired at the military depot. Around the grave where Mr. Kruger was laid beside his wife were gathered near relatives. Boer leaders and many prominent personages, including Sir Richard Solomon, representing the British government.

THE PORTLAND EXPOSITION.

The Exhibit Palaces Are Practically Completed.

Portland, Ore., Dec. 17.—With the completion of the agricultural palace, which is now ready for occupancy, and the completion of the entire administration, the group which consists of the fire department, public shelter, public comfort and administration buildings and the colonnade entrance, the Lewis and Clarke exposition stands practically finished so far as exhibit palaces are concerned. The buildings probably will be turned over to the state commission Saturday at a special meeting called for the purpose of accepting them.

MARYVILLE COLLEGE.

Donation Received of $100,000 From a Blind Philanthropist.

Knoxville, Tenn., Dec. 17.—Maryville, Tenn., college has received a donation of $100,000 from the blind philanthropist, Ralph Vorhees, of New Jersey. Dr. Samuel T. Wilson, president of the college, received the check Thursday. Fifteen thousand dollars are to be spent in building a chapel and assembly hall and $85,000 goes into the endowment fund.

GEN. KUROKI ALIVE.

Capt. March, U. S. A., Denies That He Was Killed By a Shell.

San Francisco, Dec. 17.—Capt. P. C. March, of the general staff of the United States army, one of the officers selected by the department to accompany the Japanese army in the field for the purpose of taking military observations, returned Friday on the liner Mongolia. March brings absolute refutation of the report that Gen. Kuroki was killed by a Russian shell.

The Contracts For War Vessels.

Washington, Dec. 17.—The naval board of construction recommended that the contracts for the armored cruisers Montana and North Carolina be awarded to the Newport News Shipbuilding Co. and the contract for the battleship New Hampshire to the New York Shipbuilding Co.

Strike Settlement in Sight.

Fall River, Mass., Dec. 17.—A conference has been arranged for between a committee of cotton mill manufacturers and representatives of 26,000 strikers. It is believed that a settlement of the strike is in sight.

Business Failures.

New York, Dec. 17.—Business failures in the United States for the week ending December 15 number 239, as against 231 last, 239 in the like week in 1903, 225 in 1902. In Canada, failures for the week number 37, against 23 last week.

Cost of Collecting Revenue.

Washington, Dec. 17.—Secretary Shaw Friday transmitted to the house a detailed estimate of the cost of collecting the internal revenue for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1906. The aggregate amount is $5,235,018.

Probable Fatal Shooting.

In a difficulty in Marshall & Thompson's, a negro saloon on Main street, Saturday night, Ellis Parker, a colored exercise boy for Talbot Bros., was shot and probably fatally wounded by Charles Holly, colored. Parker was not involved in the quarrel being only an innocent bystander. Holly got into a quarrel with another negro and pulling his gun began to fire. He fired three times, the crowd of negroes in the place falling over one another to get out, but Parker seemed to be the unfortunate one, receiving into his body two of the balls. The first struck him in the leg and the second in the left side just below the heart. The later wound may prove fatal as the doctors could not locate the ball.

Holly made his escape and has not been arrested up to the time we go to press.

Open Nights.

Our store will remain open nights until after the holidays.

Meeting of Bourbon Bar.

The attorneys were so pleased with Judge J. D. Carroll at the term of court just closed, they called a meeting of the Bourbon Bar and passed resolutions and on Friday night from nine to twelve o'clock they banqueted him in a royal manner. The resolutions were as follows:

"WHEREAS, Honorable Judge John D. Carroll, by appointment of the Governor of Kentucky, has presided during the November, 1904, term of the Bourbon Circuit Court, and

"WHEREAS, By his legal attainments, his judicial acumen and his unflinching courtesy, he has rendered this term of the Bourbon Circuit Court memorable, both by the pleasant relations existing between bench and bar, and the vast number of cases passed upon and disposed of:

"Therefore, be it resolved, That the members of the Bourbon Bar hereby express their appreciation of the services rendered by Hon. Judge J. D. Carroll, to themselves, their clients and the Commonwealth;

And further, be it resolved, That in token of our appreciation these resolutions be spread upon the Order Book of this Court, and an attested copy be sent to Judge Carroll."

Judge Harmon Stitt presided as toastmaster, at the banquet, and those who responded to toasts were Denis Dundon, R. C. Talbot, H. C. Howard, Nevil C. Fisher, Judge Carroll, C. M. Thomas, E. M. Dickson, Judge J. H. Brent, Hon. W. H. McMillan, Judge Mann, T. E. Moore and J. M. Brennan. Hon. F. L. McChesney in a touching beautiful tribute to the high integrity of the members of the Bar, stated that during a Circuit Clerkship of 15 years not one of them had deceived him in reference to an agreed order. Judge Carroll said that the kindly feelings existing between the Paris attorneys was remarkable. Neither Judge Cantrill nor Commonwealth's Attorney Franklin were present.

"Who Tied My Dog Loose."

Monday morning on entering the store, S. E. Borland was surprised to find everything topsy turvey, games toys, &c., scattered in every direction. A further investigation revealed the fact that one of the Woggle Bugs had got loose and started on a rampage, scattering toy dishes, fancy glassware, and pretty tin-nacs everywhere. Two or three of the pretty plates were broken, together with some of the fancy bisque figures and vases. After eyeing the wreck a moment, Mr. B. located the pieces in an automobile and soon had everything to rights.

THE SUNSET GATES.

I have often thought, when sunset
Burned o'er the mountain's crest,
And its strange, unearthly beauty
Kindled along the west,
In a vision of wonderful splendor,
That Heaven's gates were ajar—
And past them I caught faint glimpses
Of the land where our loved ones are.

Behold!—or is it but fancy?
The sunset gates swing wide,
And I see, through their parted portals,
The hills on the Heaven-side.
The hills that are crowned with sunshine
Of a day that never ends—
The country where no grave is,
And no one mourns lost friends.

I fancy I catch through the gateway
A glimpse of the golden street,
And an echo of wonderful music,
Mystic, and low, and sweet,
Comes on the winds of sunset
From the country far away,
Where the dear, remembered voices,
Sing in God's choir to-day.

And see! But a shadow hides it,
I thought that I saw a hand,
That beckoned me to come over
To the beautiful summer land.
Oh, loved of mine, whom I miss so,
Are you there at the sunset gate
To watch for me down the pathway
That leads home, soon, or late?

Ah, the angels of dusk are closing
The gates in the western skies,
And no longer I see the city,
Or the hills of Paradise.
But love, like the soul, is deathless,
And some day—God knows when—
I shall pass through the sunset gateway
And find my own again.

—Eben E. Rexford, in N. Y. Observer.

Little France

A ROMANCE OF THE DAYS WHEN
"THE GREAT LORD HAWKE" WAS
KING OF THE SEA

BY
CYRUS TOWNSEND BRADY

Author of "Commodore Paul Jones,"
"Rear Admiral James," "For the Freedom of the Sea," etc.

Copyright, 1901, by D. Appleton & Co., New York.

CHAPTER XVI.—CONTINUED.

"Mademoiselle," he said softly, "you told me your name was—"

"De Couedic. Yes, monsieur," she answered, with her eyes still fixed upon
the street, though he noticed that she turned her face away from him.

Was she discovered at last? Could he suspect, she thought.

"I had thought," he continued, then
he stopped.

"Mademoiselle, you weep," he said.

"Yes, monsieur."

"Who passes in the street? Those lights, what are they?"

"Monsieur, a funeral."

"Whose funeral, mademoiselle?"

"Alas, monsieur, I think it is the burial of New France!"

"Mademoiselle?"

"'Tis the funeral of the Marquis de Montcalm, monsieur. He is being borne to his last rest."

"He was a brave man, Mademoiselle
de Couedic, and he died as a soldier
would faint die, in the front of the battle line."

"He was my grandfather's friend,
monsieur, and mine. He was so good
to me. I know his wife, his children.
He loved them and longed to go back to them. But he loved his country, his duty, his king, more than all,
monsieur, and so he stayed, and now
he will never go back any more."

She put her face down in her hands and sobbed bitterly. People are as little children when they weep. Where had he seen that bowed head? Heavens! was it not upon his own shoulder?
Why, the picture was the same! The moonlight was stealing through the casement just as before. She wore something filmy and white. It might have been that night-robe that had enshrined the slender girl. His heart
beat so that it nearly suffocated him,
and yet—de Couedic? It could not be!

"Mademoiselle," he said, all the passion surging in his soul quivering in his voice, "do not weep. By heaven,
I do not know how or why it is, but
to see you weep tears my very heart!
Can it be that I saw you but yesterday and loved you, mademoiselle?"

She turned and faced him. The feeling in his voice, the look in his eyes,
as she stared at him, so perfectly matched her own she had no will nor power to withstand any longer. Deliberately she fetched a light from behind the curtain and set it down on the table at the head of his bed; then she stood where the full light would fall on her face, and drawing herself
up threw out her arms wide before him.

"Monsieur!" she cried. "Oh, do you
not know me?"

"Is it thou, Little France?" he exclaimed, dazed and bewildered by his thoughts. "Who could have thought it? How beautiful!"

She dashed away the tears with her hand. She thought he had not yet recognized her, as he lay spellbound gazing on her matchless beauty. Her scarlet lips quivered a moment, then shaped themselves for sound, and from her full, soft throat came the notes of the little Breton cradle-song which he had heard her sing in the garden of the Hesperides, "Toutouie, la, la!" But no mother ever sang it to child as she sang it then.

"Anne!" he cried. "The Lady Anne!
Fool that I was! How blind! I should have known you! I should have recognized your footstep even had I lain
dead at your doorstep!"

"Sir Philip! Sir Philip!" she exclaimed. "How could you forget? But I knew! Oh, my love, my love!"

She sank on her knees at the bedside again and leaned over him.

"But you are betrothed to de Vitre?"
he cried in jealous anguish.

"Ah, Philip, my knight!" she murmured, "what matters it? 'Tis you I love, I love!"

She threw her arms around his neck; their lips met in one long kiss
charged with dreams and ideals of years. The joy, the surprise, were almost too great for him. He closed
his eyes; in his weak state he thought he would have fainted. It had all come upon him suddenly with such a shock.
She had known it for two days. He had been so desperately wounded.

She was the stronger of the two
then and she recovered herself the sooner. Something assisted her perhaps. Her throbbing breast as it lay upon his own was met by the pressure of something round and hard.
The little locket! It flashed into her jealous mind in an instant.

"Monsieur Grafton," she said, drawing away from him with a sudden change of mood, "you not only forgot
me, you not only did not know me, but you— That locket, sir?"

"Yes, mademoiselle," answered Grafton
simply, for it was impossible for him to deceive this woman, or to evade
the question.

"Ah! Carrying another woman's face over your heart and speaking love
to me!"

"O Anne!" he cried, "there may be another woman in the locket, there is only yourself in my heart."

"Whose picture is there?"

"I may not tell."

"Monsieur will not tell?"

"Nay, I can not. 'Tis honor seals my lips."

He wished he had never given the promise so lightly uttered in the cabin
of the Sutherland, but, being given, it must be faithfully kept.

"The honor of a woman?" she asked.

"Of a man, mademoiselle, of a soldier, of a friend."

"Explain yourself, monsieur."

"Mademoiselle Anne, I can not, but I give you my word of honor as an English officer, the word of an American gentleman, your mother's land,
mademoiselle, that the lady of the locket is nothing to me, that I cherish
the face of no woman except your own.
Ever since those days when I was held
a prisoner in the old chateau, since the hour—do you recall it?—when I carried
you in my arms and kissed you first,
I have loved you. I have thought and dreamed of you alone among woman-kind. When I went away from France
I left my heart behind. You have had
it—you have it now."

"But the locket?" she persisted,
while the music of his words rang

in her heart.

"Forget it."

"Take it off, then."

"I can not."

"Can not? And yet she is nothing to you, you say?"

"Even so, yet that little thing I can not do. I have sworn never to part with it until—"

"Ah, monsieur!" she continued bitterly, turning away. "You see! What can I believe?"

"Believe only that I love you; trust
in my honor; you will laugh at this,
we will laugh together, when I am able to tell you some day. In the meantime have faith in me. Won't you trust me?" he continued, as she shook her head. "Twice I might have died if it had not been for you. Twice you have called me back to life. My life is yours, and yours is mine. I will not be denied." He turned and stretched out his one uninjured hand.
"Come back. If there is the faintest
feeling of affection in your own heart,
if you know what love is, you must know 'tis here!"

She hesitated, she moved nearer,
hesitated again. He strove to rise,
wrenched his arm, covered his eyes
with his hand, stifled a moan. That decided her. He suffered, and she fled to him once again, a little murmuring
cry, an inarticulate caress on her lips.
Oh, the ecstasy of that moment!

We live long years for the emotions
of an hour, the pleasure of a second. We waste lifetimes in solitary
kisses, and the sum of dreams is gone
in a single touch.

Anne de Rohan was promised to de Vitre. She meant to keep her promise.
She was wildly, bitterly jealous of the woman in the locket, too, in spite of his assurances, although she really believed them, and she had never intended this. She knew she could never be anything to Grafton. Her reason, her sense, told her that this was folly, but
the determination of her mind was abrogated by the feelings of her heart.
Perhaps because she knew there was nothing beyond she gave way the more easily to her emotions. The flood-gates were open again, the long-pent-
up floods were out once more. Ah,
this time there would be no confining
them again!

She knelt beside that old bed, she slipped her fair, round young arm underneath his neck and lavished caresses upon him. Her hands played with the curls upon his forehead. Her eyes looked love in his, her voice whispered
endearments in broken tones; all her being went out to meet his. She was trembling with her passion, nervous
at his touch; she could not be quiet,
she must move or die. She hovered over him like an angel of love and tenderness.

He lay there so white, so pale, so weak, so happy, with a love that was
as strong as hers looking from his eyes. His one free hand she held tightly, pressed it to her breast, kissed it,
fondled it again and again.

And how beautiful she was! One look in the unfathomable depths of those great eyes might have told him
the truth before. The sound of that voice quivering with joy that was almost pain should have spoken to him.
How blind he had been—a fool! He forgot five years of separation and grieved that he had lost one day! The past faded away, the future lay in the distance, the present was their own.

Presently, as the first fierce intensity
of her passion spent itself, she laid her head upon his breast and listened in sweet surrender to the beating of his heart, hearing that heart throbbing
for her, only for her. The room was very still. Words were never coined
to express what they felt, and neither spoke.

It was dark outside. The night had fallen. Clouds had swept across the face of the moon, hiding its splendor.
The sky was overcast, muttered peals
of thunder rolled swiftly through the chamber. The candle had burned itself out, it flickered away; the gray shadows grew into darkness. It was deep and still there. In that silence
heart whispered to heart in language
which gods and lovers may understand. Bye-and-bye her arm was slipped from beneath his head. Had hours or moments passed, or had they lived an eternity since the kiss of recognition? Her head, that had lain so lightly upon his breast, was lifted.
The sweet lips, whose color he could dream of even in the darkness, melted
once again upon his own—and she was gone.

He had not moved or stirred. After she left him the sweet illusion was still heavy upon him. He could feel the presence of her head, the perfume, the fragrance of her hair, the beating of her heart. He closed his eyes in the darkness. Her lips seemed to brush
his own again—again.

Did he sleep, did he dream? All night long she seemed to be by his side.

CHAPTER XVII.

FALLS THE FLAG OF FRANCE.

DE RAMESAY stood in his private office in the shot-racked Chateau St. Louis. From
the English batteries at

Point Levis the cannons were continuously firing upon the already ruined
lower town, and even upon the castle
itself. From Townsend's intrenchments on the landward side the heavy siege guns which had been landed from the British ships were raining shot and shell upon the upper town and the citadel. Fiedmont, the French
chief of artillery, was making what reply he could. The fleet of Admiral Saunders in the basin had been moving up toward the lower town during the past week, and as de Ramesay watched them, large boats full of troops were even then being landed
on the meadows and flats at the mouth of the St. Charles river and were being drawn up in columns under cover of the ships' batteries, as if preparing to approach and storm the gate
nearest the bridge.

De Ramesay had just come in from a tour of the walls. It was a hopeless outlook indeed before the governor.

He had done his best, but the end
was approaching. Sad indeed is the moment when we realize that our best is unavailing. The rations of all had been reduced and reduced until starvation stared them in the face. No part of the town was safe now from the English fire. The very chateau itself in which he stood was riddled with shells. There was a great gaping hole in the roof of his cabinet, through which the rain poured dismally.

The temper of the garrison had grown worse and worse. Nothing whatever had been heard from de Levis. De Ramesay felt that if an assault were delivered it could not be met. His garrison originally consisted of 150 troops of the line, some 400 or 500 colony troops, and the local militia, but had been much reduced by death, wounds and starvation, and was growing less every day. The colonial soldiers and militia had been deserting in handfuls.

Presently Capt. Rouvigny entered.

"Monsieur," he said, saluting, "a body of merchants, headed by Monsieur Daine, are here to see you, and—"

"Bid them attend me in the great hall of the chateau, captain," interrupted the governor gloomily, "and summon the officers of my staff. Let some one go for Monsieur Fiedmont,
if he can be spared from the walls.
We need his counsel."

"I omitted to state, monsieur," continued the young officer, "that the merchants are accompanied by the officers of the city militia."

"Let them all come together, I will see them all. I know what it means,"
said de Ramesay despondently.

A few moments after he entered the great hall of the bullet-ridden castle.
Many of the portraits which adorned
it had been destroyed by the fire of the enemy. Grim old Frontenac, the unconquerable, however, still kept watch and ward over the territory he had loved, now fast slipping into the hands of the hated English. Had he been in de Vandreuil's place, thought de Ramesay, they might not now be in such a pass.

Through the broken window-panes
the rain beat and the wind swept in mournful harmony with the thoughts
of the people who crowded the room.
At the lower end were congregated a body of the most influential citizens of the town. Their plain but rich dress, comfortable cloaks, prosperous appearance, proclaimed that they were men of substance and condition. A little apart from them stood the officers
of the colonial militia in bedraggled,
weather-stained uniforms.

The merchants faced de Ramesay boldly. The eyes of the citizen soldiers sank to the ground, and they looked everywhere but at him. They shifted uneasily under the stern gaze
of the veteran commander, while their hands played nervously with their sword-hilts. De Ramesay was attended by the officers of his staff, able soldiers all; some of them were drenched
with rain and covered with marks of their exposure to the inclement
weather, which showed they had just come from the ramparts. Among them were Rouvigny, St. Luc, Fiedmont, and Joannes the town major,
and with them de Vitre, still under restraint by de Ramesay's order.

The governor stood at the great
table with his officers grouped around
him. The merchants and militia officers, drifted together at the opposite side. A stranger would have instantly recognized that here were two parties
to debate a serious proposition. Sadness was the predominating note in de Ramesay's face; haughty pride and contempt flashed from the eyes of the nobles and professional soldiers at his back; dogged determination was evidenced in every line in the portly figures of the merchants; and stubborn
shame spoke from the drooped heads
of the militia officers.

"Messieurs," said the governor
quietly, "you have asked an audience
for a purpose which I can but too well divine. Will you speak your mind and have done with it? The gentlemen of the counter first."

He turned inquiringly to the merchants, but no one apparently cared to break the silence. No one wished to assume the stigma of being the first
to make the proposition in furtherance
of which they had assembled.

"What, gentlemen!" continued de Ramesay sarcastically, "are your desires so base that none of you have even courage to mention them? Monsieur Daine, it was at your house, I am informed, that the gentlemen held their meeting this morning. Will you speak?"

"Monsieur le Chevalier," stammered
Daine, flushing and paling by turns,
"we are—we cannot—we do not—in short, we came to beg you to surrender
the town."

"Ah!" said the governor, "and why should I give up a charge devolved upon me by his majesty the king?"

"We are starving, monsieur," answered Daine more boldly; "our dwellings, our shops, our warehouses are ruined. We can do no more. If the English break into the town, if they storm the walls, we have over 2,000
women and children here. Think of them, sir!"

"True," said de Ramesay, "but so long as we have arms in our hands the English will not break through the walls. Is it not so, gentlemen?"

"Vive la nouvelle France!"

"Let us die for the flag!"

"Vive le roi!"

"Death to the English!" broke the confused exclamations from the little group of officers behind the chevalier.
The others were silent.

Fulsome Praise That Had Upon Its Object Anything but the Desired Effect.

Barrett Wendell, professor of English
at Harvard, cannot endure fulsome
praise of any sort or in any disguise.
This is well known to Cambridge undergraduates, and seldom do any of them offend, relates a London paper.
At summer schools, where he is in great demand as a lecturer, he does not escape so easily.

A year or so ago, he gave a course
in English literature at the University of California. At the first meeting of the class he asked the members to state in writing the benefits they expected to gain from the course. Many filled their papers with laudatory reference to Professor Wendell, but one young woman far surpassed all others.

"I have long worshipped you from afar off," she began, "and now come
to sit at your feet and sip inspiration
from your gifted lips."

Professor Wendell read the paper at the next meeting of the class with this caustic comment:

"I have never known of a woman
making such a fool of herself on a single page before."

One More Glass Would Not Be Missed.

One day a fussy fellow met Father Healy, of Dublin, by the seashore; and thus accosted him: "Father Healy,
I am undergoing a cure, and I take a tumbler of sea water three times a day.
Now, I've had my full allowance today, but do you think I might have
one, just one, tumbler more?"

Father Healy put his head on one side and looked at the ocean, lost in thought. "Well," he said, at last, with a gravely judicial air, "I don't think it would be missed."—Cleveland Leader.

A Mild Suggestion.

"Papa," said little Arthur after his mother had punished him, "will you do something for me?"

"What is it you want?"

"Marry somebody else, and I wish you'd pick out grandma, because she's always kind to me."—Chicago Record Herald.

RIGHT NOT RECOGNIZED.

Son of Busy Traveling Man Indignant at Familiarity of Scarce Parent.

The story of the hard worked newspaper man who devoted so much of his time to his work that he did not recognize the youngest member of his family when he met the youngster unexpectedly is not without its parallel. In this case, says the New York Press, it was the baby, who, not having sufficient opportunity to become acquainted with his proud parent, made a remark which led to a resolution of reformation.

A traveling man naturally gets home but once in each week, sometimes drawing a two-week trip, and in other cases being away from his home for even a longer period. He usually tries to dash in home for Sunday, and on one of these dashes, in a certain home, the young man of the family having acquired that title some four years previously, was very bad, indeed, and finally forced the father to administer the merited, though mild, punishment. The injured youngster immediately made a wild dash for his mother, waiting at the top of his voice: "Mother, mother, mother; that man that comes here on Sunday has been spanking me."

HAD FINE EYE FOR HAIRS.

Professor of Natural History Was Too Keen for Mischievous Students.

An eminent naturalist who holds—and fills, as well—a chair in a university, announced to the members of his class one morning that he had something of unusual interest to show them, relates Youth's Companion.

"I have here, gentlemen," he said, "some hairs from the skin of a young crested seal, and we will proceed to study their peculiarities."

Unfolding the small piece of paper that contained them, he spread the hairs out on a sheet of white cardboard and turned to get his microscope, which was on a desk behind him.

While his back was turned a roguish student quickly swept the hairs off the desk into his hand, and substituted others very closely resembling them.

"Young gentlemen," said the professor, severely, a moment later, as he glanced at the sheet of cardboard, "there has been some underground work here. These are mole hairs."

They never attempted to fool the professor again.

Assistance Needed.

The real-estate man was doing his best to sell an undesirable lot.

"I guess you're a good deal like the man who caught the bear," said his prospective victim, who was pretty foxy.

"What do you mean?"

"You want some one to help you let go."—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Doing Great Work.

Florisant, Mo., Dec. 19th.—(Special).—That Dodd's Kidney Pills are doing a great work in curing the more terrible forms of Kidney Disease, such as Bright's Disease, Dropsy and Diabetes, everybody knows. But it must also be noted that they are doing a still greater work in wiping out thousands of cases of the earlier stages of Kidney Disease. Take for instance Mrs. Peter Barreau, of this place. She says:

"I have been subject to pains in my back and knees for about three years, but since I have been taking Dodd's Kidney Pills I have been entirely cured."

Others here tell similar stories. In fact, in this part of Missouri there are scores of people who have cured the early symptoms of Kidney Disease with Dodd's Kidney Pills. The use of the great American Kidney Remedy thus saved not only the lives of Kidney Disease victims, but thousands of other Americans from years of sufferings.

ARBITRATION FAVORED

Mass Meeting Held in New York to Ratify Treaties Signed.

A Resolution Was Passed Favoring the Extension By the Government of the United States of the Principle of Arbitration.

New York, Dec. 17.—A mass meeting, called to urge the prompt ratification of the arbitration treaties recently signed by the state department with several of the leading foreign powers, was held Friday night at Carnegie hall, under the auspices of the New York executive committee of the American conference on international arbitration. There was a large attendance and the speakers were repeatedly applauded.

John Crosby Brown, in an opening address, expressed regret at the absence of Andrew Carnegie, who was to have opened the meeting, but who, he said, could not be present.

Mayor George B. McClellan presided and was the first speaker.

M. Linn Bruce, lieutenant-governor-elect, spoke against deciding differences between nations by war and was followed by Archbishop Ireland.

While the archbishop was speaking he was interrupted by a man who cried, "Give somebody else a chance." The archbishop immediately sat down. The audience hooted the man who had shouted and ushers tried to find him, but failed. Then the audience applauded until Archbishop Ireland resumed his speech.

Letters from Grover Cleveland, Carl Schurz and John Mitchell were read. Letters from Andrew Carnegie and Gen. Nelson A. Miles were also read, after which Bishop Henry C. Potter was introduced and spoke briefly.

In conclusion he said:

"I hope that the resolutions which this noble meeting shall pass to-night may have in them a fine note of ringing comment and that senators of the United States will understand that it is the mind of the intelligent people in this great metropolis that war shall cease."

The following resolution was passed:

Whereas, The method of settling international disputes and difficulties by arbitration rather than by force is in accord with the highest prospects of reason and humanity; and

Whereas, The civilized nations of the world have, by jointly establishing the permanent court at The Hague, recognized the moral obligation which rests upon them to avoid the horrors of war by the submission of their controversies to judicial determination, and

Whereas, The government of the United States which for the past half century has been foremost in the actual resort to arbitration, has negotiated and is negotiating treaties with various powers making compulsory upon the contracting nations the reference of disputes of a certain nature to the international court at The Hague; now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, the citizens of New York, in mass meeting assembled, favor the extension by the government of the United States of the principle of arbitration to all questions which can not otherwise be brought to a pacific determination.

CHILDREN BURNED TO DEATH.

Parents Were Frightfully Injured in Attempt to Rescue Them.

Piedmont, W. Va., Dec. 17.—Two children of Riley O'Haner, aged 6 and 3 years respectively, were burned to death just west of here. The dwelling which was occupied by Mr. O'Haner and his wife and four children caught fire and was completely destroyed. Mr. and Mrs. O'Haner were frightfully burned in a vain attempt to rescue the two children that were cremated. The other two children escaped uninjured.

New York, Dec. 17.—President Roosevelt will be asked to request the members of the New York Building Trades Employers' association to make peace with the old plasterers society of this city.

Gen. Stoessel Wounded.

London, Dec. 17.—Gen. Stoessel, the Russian military commander at Port Arthur, according to a dispatch from Chefoo to the Daily Telegraph, has again been wounded, this time by a rifle bullet. The report adds that the wound is not serious.

Merchant Marine Commission Report.

Washington, Dec. 17.—Report of the merchant marine commission will not be made to congress until January 4. Members of the commission until Friday had expected to make the report before the holiday recess.

RANDOM YARNLETS.

Sir Arthur Sullivan once wanted to direct Alexander Mackenzie to a house of which he knew the approximate location, but had forgotten the number. He said the foot-scraper in front of the door was in E flat. Sir Alexander kicked several scrapers until he heard the note.

Among the many applicants for the part the late Dan Leno was to have played in the Christmas pantomime at the Drury Lane theater was a 14-year-old boy, who came in haste, hoping "the job wasn't gone." The manager liked his impudence, and so finally engaged him to personate a lizard in the piece.

He was a Rhodes scholar at Oxford. He had come from Germany and was receiving his first lessons in rowing. "Back water," said the coach. The German did not understand. The coach explained that it means to use his oar "in the opposite way," and the Rhodes man followed instructions to the letter, as nearly as he understood. He lifted his oar from the rowlock and put the handle into the water.

A well-known New York clergyman was talking to a number of young men recently about the evils of cigarette smoking. To bring out his point, he asked what the youngsters would think if they should meet an angel wandering along the street with a cigarette in his mouth. One of the gathering thought a moment, and then asked the minister what he would think if he met an angel in a frock coat, with patent leather shoes and an umbrella.

A worthy dame of Dundee, Scotland, in order to keep down her gas account, was in the habit of blowing down the pipes, thus reversing the hands of the registering dial of the meter. All went well until a new inspector came. After examining the meter, he ciphered long and earnestly. At length the old lady anxiously exclaimed: "Am no' tae hae a bad account this time, am I?" "No, mem," said the inspector, "it's the other way about. The company's owing you tuppence. You have surely ben blowing verra hard this time."

CURIOUS CONDENSATIONS.

Miss Stella Snyder, a Missouri school-teacher, was recently sued for $1,000 damages for whipping one of her pupils. She won the case and as a result of the publicity attending the trial she has secured an appointment in the state reform school for girls.

Though 85 years old, Philip Grimes walked 15 miles over the hills, from New Haven to Derby, Conn., recently to instruct an undertaker how to bury him. He made the distance in three hours. On reaching Joseph Colwell's undertaking office he sank down exhausted.

One of the worst perplexities that a New England school-teacher has met this fall fell to the lot of a young girl at New Auburn. She had nine small children arrive at the school one morning and found that they did not know a word of English and spoke only Russian.

During a curtain speech in Chillicothe, Mo., the other night, Frank James, the ex-bandit, said: "If our Saviour was to come on earth and say to me: 'Where can I get a brave and fearless man to assist St. Peter to guard the portals of Heaven?' I would say: 'Cole Younger.'"

Hamlet A. Rye, a business man of Sioux City, Ia., is organizing a society which is to be called the Appendixless club. Mr. Rye has called a meeting of all who have lost their vermiforms and purposes a permanent organization. "It will be something like a G. A. R.," Mr. Rye said. "We can talk of our wounds and our battles within the prison walls of the hospitals."

FROM SCIENTIFIC SOURCES.

The reason of the sun assuming such a deep red color on a misty day is owing to the fact that fog permits the passage of red rays more easily than those of any other color.

Miss Mary A. Booth, of Springfield, Mass., is well known in the scientific world. She inherited her love for science from her father, and is one of the few women admitted to the Royal Microscopical Society of London.

Sir Joseph Dalton Hooker, the greatest living botanist, has just passed his eighty-seventh birthday. He was the lifelong friend of Huxley. Some of his most interesting work has been the result of his studies in Utah, Colorado, California and the Rockies.

Remarkable fireproofing properties are credited oxide of titanium by an English dyer. Flannel treated with it could not be made to burst into flame, and other textiles are claimed to be made equally resistant, while it cannot be removed by dyeing, boiling or washing.

In 1878 something happened on Jupiter which caused a red blotch to appear in his southern hemisphere, near one of the great belts that cross his disk like huge bands of colored clouds. It was 30,000 miles long and 8,000 miles broad, yet, after all, only a little patch on the mighty disk! It has remained ever since, sometimes brightening to almost the crimson hue of fire, and sometimes fading nearly to invisibility, yet always, even when faintest, certifying its presence and its power by keeping the area originally covered by it clear of all other objects.

WAYS OF OTHER PEOPLES.

No person under 16 years of age is permitted to enter a theater or tavern in Heligoland.

In Japan no woman is ashamed of her age, but she tells it out in the arrangement of her hair, so that all the world may know it.

A traveler in the African wastes says that nearly all the natives show a great aversion to solitude, even in broad daylight. This aversion is due to their superstitious terrors.

All well-educated Spanish women are taught from their earliest years to handle the sword, and as a result they are noted for their admirable figures and easy walk.

Lancashire agricultural laborers credit certain of their fellows with power to cast good and evil spells. At Dunstable men carry a live snail in a pill box to ward off toothache, eat stewed earthworms as a cure for jaundice and fried mouse for whooping-cough, and cherish all the old superstitions as to the dead which made Merrie England sad.

FOOTWEAR FINDINGS.

It is wiser, both for economy and comfort, to wear alternately two pair of shoes rather than wear one pair all the time.

When patent leather shows signs of cracking take the shoes at once to a good shoe dealer and have them oiled to prevent further damage.

When shoes are wet do not put them too near the heat or they will stiffen and crack. Turn them rather on one side in a dry but not warm place.

Remember that shoes too tightly laced retard the circulation, and in this case even the thickest leather will not prevent the feet from being cold.

It should be remembered that the feet spread with exercise, and this fact should be taken into consideration when seated comfortably at the dealer's trying on new shoes.

Mrs. Anderson, a prominent society woman of Jacksonville, Fla., daughter of Recorder of Deeds, West, who witnessed her signature to the following letter, praises Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—There are but few wives and mothers who have not at times endured agonies and such pain as only women know. I wish such women knew the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It is a remarkable medicine, different in action from any I ever knew and thoroughly reliable."

"I have seen cases where women doctored for years without permanent benefit, who were cured in less than three months after taking your Vegetable Compound, while others who were chronic and incurable came out cured, happy, and in perfect health after a thorough treatment with this medicine. I have never used it myself without gaining great benefit. A few doses restores my strength and appetite, and tones up the entire system. Your medicine has been tried and found true, hence I fully endorse it."—Mrs. R. A. ANDERSON, 225 Washington St., Jacksonville, Fla.

Mrs. Reed, 2425 E. Cumberland St., Philadelphia, Pa., says:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I feel it my duty to write and tell you the good I have received from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

"I have been a great sufferer with female trouble, trying different doctors and medicines with no benefit. Two years ago I went under an operation, and it left me in a very weak condition. I had stomach trouble, backache, headache, palpitation of the heart, and was very nervous; in fact, I ached all over. I find yours is the only medicine that reaches such troubles, and would cheerfully recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to all suffering women."

When women are troubled with irregular or painful menstruation, weakness, leucorrhoea, displacement or ulceration of the womb, that bearing-down feeling, inflammation of the ovaries, backache, flatulence, general debility, indigestion, and nervous prostration, they should remember there is one tried and true remedy. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once removes such troubles.

The experience and testimony of some of the most noted women of America go to prove, beyond a question, that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will correct all such trouble at once by removing the cause and restoring the organs to a healthy and normal condition. If in doubt, write Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., as thousands do. Her advice is free and helpful.

No other medicine for women in the world has received such widespread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine has such a record of cures of female troubles. Refuse to buy any substitute.

$5000 FORFEIT if we cannot forthwith produce the original letters and signatures of above testimonials, which will prove their absolute genuineness. Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

Madame Rejane at Lexington.

Mme. Gabrielle Rejane, the great French comedienne, will be seen at the Lexington opera house Wednesday, December 21. She will present her most successful play "Zaza."

Mme. Rejane's present tour of this country is the theatrical event of the year in this county. Her tour of twelve weeks is under the direction of Liebler & Co. and during it she will be seen in but ten cities. Of these, Lexington is one and it is to be expected that the representative theatre goers of the entire bluegrass region will attend the performance and welcome the great star.

Mme. Rejane is the greatest actress of Europe, possibly of the entire world, and is accompanied by her own company which she brought with her direct from Paris. The sale of seats opens Saturday, December 17, and all orders when accompanied by remittances, will receive prompt attention.

Startling Evidence.

Fresh testimony in great quantity is constantly coming in, declaring Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds to be unequalled. A recent expression from J. T. McFarland, Bentonsville, Va., serves as example. He writes: "I had bronchitis for three years and doctored all the time without being benefited. Then I began taking Dr. King's New Discovery, a few bottles wholly cured me." Equally effective in curing all Lung and Throat troubles, Consumption, Pneumonia and Grip. Guaranteed by Oberdorfer, the druggist. Trial bottles free, regular sizes 50c and $1.00. 1jan
